Title: STIPULATED MOTION TO EXTEND TESTIMONY AND TRIAL DATES AND RESPONSE TO ORDER OF JANUARY 5, 2009

Part 1 of 1

IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE
BEFORE THE TRADEMARK TRIAL AND APPEAL BOARD

In re Matter of Application No. 78/302,487 for the mark: KALI Mattel, Inc., Opposer, vs. MGA Entertainment, Inc., Applicant.	Opposition No. 91-162237 STIPULATED MOTION TO EXTEND TESTIMONY AND TRIAL DATES AND RESPONSE TO ORDER OF JANUARY 5, 2009
---	--

Pursuant to 37 C.F.R. § 2.121(d) and TBMP § 501, Opposer Mattel, Inc. ("Mattel"), by its counsel, and Applicant MGA Entertainment, Inc. ("Applicant"), by its counsel, hereby jointly respond to the Board's order of January 5, 2009 concerning the parties' prior motions to extend the testimony periods.

First, as requested by the Board, attached are copies of the complaints in the consolidated lawsuit entitled Bryant v. Mattel, Inc., Case Nos. CV 04-9049 and CV 04-09059, and MGA Entertainment, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc., Case No. 05 CV 02727 pending in the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California, respectively as Exhibits A and B. Also attached are copies of the Court's docket for each case, included in Exhibits A and B, respectively.

Second, the parties jointly move for and stipulate to an extension of 60 days of the schedule set in this action in order to compete settlement discussions. The parties have exchanged several settlement letters. Applicant continues to consider Mattel's settlement proposal sent on February 29, 2008. There are only a few issues remaining for the parties to negotiate, and the parties are hopeful that they can reach a settlement in the near future. The complexity and length of the federal litigation between the parties has prevented the parties from completing their settlement discussions. Specifically, there have been three phases to the case (Phases 1(a), 1(b) and Phase 2), with trial of Phase 1(a) beginning in May 2008. Proceedings continue to the present with post-trial motions and appeals. There are significant and complex post trial motions scheduled for hearing on February 11, 2009. The parties anticipate it will take some time for the District Court to rule on the post trial motions. On January 6, 2009, the District Court lifted the discovery stay for Phase 2 of the litigation. No trial date has yet been set for Phase 2.

Accordingly, Applicant has not been able to respond to Opposer's February 29th settlement proposal. Likewise, the parties will be unable to focus on their respective testimony periods while the third phase of the trial is ongoing. Following the conclusion of the Bryant trial, the parties will resume settlement discussions and are hopeful that they will reach a settlement soon thereafter.

In order to concentrate on their settlement efforts, Applicant and Opposer agreed to this extension via email on January 5, 2009. Accordingly, Opposer and Applicant stipulate to the following schedule for the testimony and trial dates in this action:

PERIOD	DATE
Period for Discovery to Close	Closed
Testimony period for party in position of Plaintiff to close	April 8, 2009

Testimony period for party in position of
Defendant to close

June 7, 2009

Rebuttal Testimony period to close

July 22, 2009

Should the Board require any additional documents from the federal court action to consider this motion, the parties should be notified and a prompt response will be made.

Respectfully submitted,

Date: January 27, 2009

1 Plaintiff Carter Bryant ("Bryant") for his complaint against Defendant
2 Mattel, Inc. ("Mattel") alleges as follows:

3 PARTIES

4 1. Bryant is an individual residing in Springfield-Greene County, 5 Missouri.

6 2. Bryant is informed and believes, and based thereon alleges, that Mattel
7 is a Delaware corporation with a principal place of business at 333 Continental 8 Boulevard, El Segundo, California.

9 JURISDICTION AND VENUE

10 3. This is an action under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201 and 2202 for declaratory 11 relief and further relief based upon a declaratory judgment or decree and the 12 Copyright Act of 1976, 17 U.S.C. §§ 101 et seq. This Court has original subject
13 matter jurisdiction over Bryant's claim pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1338(a) 14 & (b).

15 4. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Mattel, as it conducts 16 continuous, systematic and routine business within the State of California and the 17 County of Los Angeles.

18 5. Venue is proper in the United States District Court for the Central 19 District of California pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391(b) & (c).

20 BACKGROUND FACTS

21 6. Bryant is the creative genius and inspiration behind an immensely
22 successful line of fashion dolls called "Bratz."

23 7. Since its debut on the market in June, 2001, the "Bratz" line has 24 revitalized and invigorated the fashion-doll industry, long dominated by Mattel's
25 "Barbie" dolls.

26 8. Mattel, however, does not like the competition.
27
28

1 16. By age nine, Bryant had begun to draw fashions. Fashion soon
2 became a passion. He bought books on Hollywood costume design and studied
3 them intensely. He made designs for his puppets and drew characters and outfits
4 for them. He even won a contest drawing "Archie" comic book characters and 5 considered becoming a comic book artist.

6 17. Bryant took art classes throughout junior high and high school. He 7 also began reading, and studying, fashion magazines such as "Vogue" and 8 "Harper's Bazaar," thinking he might one day have a career in fashion design. He 9 began creating his own fashions based on what he saw in such magazines.

10 18. After high school, Bryant considered going to design school, but gave 11 up the dream when he realized that his family could not afford to send him.

12 19. Instead, he tried songwriting for a while, and even formed a band in 13 1988. For several years, he took dead-end jobs to make ends meet, such as stocking 14 shelves at Toys 'R' Us. But Bryant never let go of his dream, or gave up his 15 interest in drawing and design.

16 20. In 1993 he applied and was accepted to Parsons School of Design in 17 Paris. Based on the information contained in Parsons' website, since its founding 18 in 1896, Parsons has been a forerunner in the field of art and design and was the 19 first art and design school in America to found a campus abroad in 1920.

20 21. Unfortunately, despite loans and work programs, attendance was cost-
21 prohibitive. Bryant went, instead, to Otis College of Art and Design in Los 22 Angeles. According to its website, Otis began in 1918, when Los Angeles Times
23 founder Harrison Gray Otis bequeathed his MacArthur Park property for a public
24 art college. Otis is a four-year college offering bachelor's degrees in a variety of art
25 and design-related areas including architecture, fine arts, fashion design and toy 26 design.

27 22. On an accelerated track, Bryant finished his entire first year in just 5 28 months, from January to June of 1994. He then applied and was accepted to

1 transfer to Parsons, however, again he could not raise enough money to go. He 2 stayed one more semester at Otis, but with only a small scholarship and mounting 3 debt, Bryant left the school in December, 1994. He went home to Missouri for 4 Christmas and ended up staying.

5 23. Realizing that going to Paris and working as a fashion designer was 6 simply not economically feasible, Bryant got the idea that he might be able to 7 combine his love of dolls and fashion by becoming a fashion designer for dolls in 8 the toy industry. Naturally thinking of "Barbie," the fashion doll that had 9 dominated the market for decades, he put together a portfolio of ten or so drawings
10 to send to Mattel, but lacked the confidence to actually send it to such a huge, 11 intimidating company.

12 24. By 1995, however, he decided he had nothing to lose. Broke and with 13 no real career opportunities in sight, Bryant sent the package to Mattel.

14 Bryant's Employment by Mattel

15 25. Much to his surprise, Mattel called him for an interview. After 16 completing a "trial project" for the company at its request prior to his being 17 considered for formal employment, he was hired as a temporary employee in 18 September, 1995. He was promoted to a full-time position in November, 1995.

19 26. During his time at Mattel, Bryant worked exclusively on "Barbie"-
20 related projects for the "Barbie" family of dolls, as directed by Mattel's marketers.
21 Mattel told him what they wanted him to design, and he did what he was directed to 22 do.

23 27. On occasion, Bryant would offer new, original and creative ideas to 24 Mattel, but Mattel discouraged anything non-traditional. No matter what the idea
25 was, Mattel would try to figure out a way to use it for "Barbie," or not at all.

26 28. Bryant felt that his creativity and originality were being stifled and 27 suppressed at Mattel.

28

1 33. Bryant was simply trying to figure out a way to make a living doing
2 what he enjoyed. Unable to support himself as a freelance artist, however, and 3 turning thirty and not wanting to live at home forever, Bryant realized he needed a
4 steady job. Based on Mattel's comments to him before he left its employ in 1998
5 indicating an interest in having him remain with the company, he reapplied and 6 secured a position with Mattel starting in January 1999.

7 34. Mattel hired Bryant back to work exclusively on Mattel's
8 "collectibles" line, a high-end, expensive line of "Barbie" dolls designed for adult
9 doll collectors, not children. He began working for the company again on January 10 4, 1999. Again, Mattel's marketing department directed Bryant to create the 11 designs it wanted to market.

12 35. Bryant never showed Mattel the ideas, drawings, designs and concepts
13 that he had worked on on his own while he had been gone from the company,
14 including the concept for what later became the "Bratz" dolls. He already knew 15 that Mattel was not receptive to new, creative, innovative ideas. Besides that, they 16 were his, and he was afraid that Mattel would not give him credit or compensation.

17 36. One day he happened to show his concept for "Bratz" dolls to a friend
18 who did freelance work for MGA Entertainment, Inc. ("MGA").

19 37. Bryant's friend thought that MGA might be interested in talking to 20 Bryant, and arranged a meeting.

21 38. MGA ultimately offered Bryant a consulting arrangement. His 22 agreement with MGA was signed on or about October 4, 2000. Bryant resigned
23 from Mattel immediately, giving two weeks notice, but stayed at the company until 24 October 20 to finish up and transition the projects on which he had been working.

25 39. On information and belief, MGA was founded in 1979 as a small 26 consumer electronics business and made its first foray into the toy business in 1987
27 marketing handheld LCD games featuring licensed "Nintendo" characters, where 28 its initial success allowed it the opportunity to obtain additional licenses for such

1 popular properties as the "Power Rangers" and others. By the time Bryant started
2 working for MGA in late 2000, the company was selling other kinds of toys and 3 dolls.

4 40. After leaving Mattel, Bryant began working with a team of MGA
5 employees and freelancers to develop and physically embody Bryant's concept.
6 The development took substantial time, effort, creativity, money, and know-how,
7 but with this effort, Bryant's concept for "Bratz" dolls was reduced to practice and 8 became a reality.

9 "Bratz" Dolls Revolutionize The Fashion Doll Market

10 41. MGA first unveiled the "Bratz" doll concept at the Hong Kong Toy
11 Fair in January 2001. In June 2001, MGA introduced the line to the market.

12 42. Unlike Barbie Dolls, the "Bratz" line of dolls and branded products 13 (collectively "Bratz Dolls") sport a hip, multi-ethnic urban look that appeals to 14 contemporary teenage and pre-teen girls. At approximately 9.5 to 10 inches tall, 15 the Bratz Dolls are intentionally shorter than Barbie Dolls and look notably 16 different, with large heads, big dramatic eyes and lips, small, thin bodies, oversized 17 feet (to emphasize shoe fashion and to stand on their own, unlike "Barbie," which 18 requires a stand), and up-to-date fashions.

19 43. Featuring and embodying the slogan "The Girls With a Passion for 20 Fashion!", Bratz Dolls, invigorated, transformed and expanded the fashion doll 21 market, in particular proving popular among "tween" age girls - i.e., those between 22 childhood and adolescence - who Mattel had all but abandoned as a market.

23 44. On information and belief, the "Bratz" line has been praised by 24 consumers, retailers and toy industry analysts alike. In 2001, the "Bratz" line won 25 the Toy Industry Association ("TIA") People's Choice Toy of the Year Award, the 26 Family Fun Toy of the Year Award and Toy Wishes Hot Pick Award. In 2002, the 27 "Bratz" line again won the TIA People's Choice Toy of the Year Award, the 28 Family Fun Toy of the Year Award. LIMA, the licensing industries official arm,

1 awarded MGA's "Bratz" the best character license of the year as well as the overall
2 best licensed property of the year for 2003. MGA's "Bratz" also earned the coveted
3 TIA "Property of the Year" and "Girl Toy of the Year," in 2003, as well as the 4 Family Fun Toy of the Year Award. MSNBC named "Bratz" the "Hottest Toy of 5 the Year," and both MGA and "Bratz" received several other accolades.

6 45. According to media reports and business analysts, this success caught
7 Mattel by surprise, with many Mattel insiders reportedly assuming that Bratz would 8 be a short-lived fad.

9 46. As it turned out, "Bratz" was not a fleeting fancy among young girls.

10 47. Beginning in 2002, "Bratz" really gave "Barbie" a run for its money
11 as the top selling fashion doll.

12 48. Bryant continues to contribute to, and provide ideas, concepts and 13 designs for "Bratz" on an ongoing basis as a designer and consultant for MGA. For 14 example, Bryant designed a wholly original male character for MGA, which was 15 turned into the "Bratz Boyz" line of dolls by MGA.

16 Mattel's Market Response to "Bratz"

17 49. In response to "Bratz", Mattel, in 2002, rushed to release "My Scene 18 Barbie," a line of fashion dolls under the "Barbie" name that looked much more 19 like "Bratz" than the traditional main line "Barbie" Doll. Like "Bratz," "My Scene 20 Barbie" dolls have oversized heads, artfully made-up almond-shaped eyes, large,
21 overly-lined and lipsticked lips, trendy clothes and hair styles, over-sized feet and a
22 more ethnic look. Like the "Bratz" Dolls, "My Scene" Dolls are packaged with two 23 outfits and an accessory. And, since fall 2003, like the "Bratz, which are 24 introduced with themes, "My Scene" Dolls are introduced with a theme as well.

25 50. After the success of MGA's "Bratz Boyz" dolls, Mattel also 26 introduced male doll characters to the "My Scene" line, even though for 45 years
27 the "Barbie" line had only included a single male doll - Barbie's boyfriend "Ken"

28

1 (whom, after 45 years as her boyfriend, Barbie “dumped” in a 2004 Mattel publicity
2 stunt to revive “Barbie” in the face of the “Bratz” success).

3 51. On information and belief, the “My Scene” Dolls, however, have not
4 come close to achieving the popularity and acclaim of “Bratz.”

5 52. A year after the debut of “My Scene,” Mattel launched “Flavas,” a line
6 of urban fashion dolls also intended to appeal to the “tween” market. “Flavas,”
7 were poorly received by children, parents and the toy industry, and Mattel
8 discontinued the line less than a year after its launch.

9 Mattel’s Accusations of Copyright Infringement Against Bryant

10 53. Unable to supplant “Bratz” – the more popular, better quality product
11 – with the inferior and less popular “Flavas” or even “My Scene,” Mattel changed
12 tactics. It turned to disparaging Bryant, and accusing him of copying from Mattel.

13 54. In or about July 2003, Mattel “sources” told a Wall Street Journal
14 reporter that “[I]nside Mattel, some are convinced the BRATZ borrow liberally
15 from a Mattel project that was scrapped at the testing stage in 1998.” Attached
16 hereto as Exhibit A is a true and correct copy of this article.

17 55. Mattel’s thinly veiled accusation of copyright infringement against 18 Bryant took more substantive form when, in April, 2004, Mattel sued Bryant in 19 California state court for, among other things, allegedly “converting” Mattel’s 20 intellectual property (the “Bryant Litigation”). Bryant sought discovery from 21 Mattel, accordingly, regarding any Mattel idea, concept, project or product
22 allegedly stolen or copied by Bryant, including “Toon Teens,” “Diva Stars,” and 23 “My Scene.” Faced with objections from Mattel, Bryant offered to take no further 24 discovery on such issues if Mattel would enter into a fact stipulation that it would 25 not claim that Bryant copied “Bratz” from Mattel’s “Toon Teens.” Mattel refused
26 to enter into such a stipulation. For reasons unknown, Mattel has not yet sued
27 Bryant for copyright infringement. It has, however, enlisted a surrogate to take a 28

1 first-run at attempting to establish infringement, perhaps intending to see what the 2 outcome might be before launching a direct attack itself.

3 56. Specifically, in 2002, MGA filed suit in Hong Kong against the 4 manufacturers of "Funky Tweenz" (known infringers of intellectual property in the 5 toy industry) (the "Hong Kong defendants"). "Funky Tweenz" is a line of "Bratz"
6 knock-off products. In connection with this lawsuit (the "Hong Kong Lawsuit"), 7 Bryant has been informed that MGA filed various documents substantiating its 8 ownership of "Bratz," including with regard to Bryant's involvement in MGA's
9 development of "Bratz" and in its reduction to practice of Bryant's original 10 inspirational sketches. Bryant has also been informed that in August 2004 the 11 Hong Kong defendants produced to MGA's counsel unreleased photographs of,
12 and documents relating to, Mattel's "Toon Teens" project – the same project Mattel
13 had mentioned in the Wall Street Journal article as the supposed origin of "Bratz."
14 The Hong Kong defendants initially refused, however, to authenticate these 15 documents, or to divulge the source of these photographs. The defendants also 16 refused to explain the purported relevance of the documents to the Hong Kong
17 Lawsuit.

18 57. Finally, however, Bryant has been informed that on October 7, 2004,
19 the Hong Kong defendants revealed that Mattel was the source of the "Toon Teens"
20 documents and information. Indeed, the Hong Kong defendants have revealed that 21 they – accused copyright infringers -- have a document-sharing agreement with 22 Mattel. Apparently, Mattel prefers to assist known infringers in Hong Kong in 23 trying to prove that Bryant copied Mattel in coming up with "Bratz", instead of 24 trying to prove it themselves in a United States federal court of law – or at least for 25 the time being, that seems to be Mattel's strategy.

26 58. On information and belief, Mattel, and the same counsel representing 27 it in the Bryant Litigation, have told the Hong Kong defendants that "Bratz" is not 28 an original design and have provided documents and other information to those

1 defendants in an effort to assist such infringers to evade liability for copyright
2 infringement of "Bratz" in the Hong Kong action. On information and belief,
3 Matter has told the Hong Kong defendants that the "Toon Teens" documents
4 provided to such defendants prove that Bryant copied and infringed Mattel's "Toon
5 Teens" or other Mattel property.

6 59. Mattel even rushed to register the copyright for its long-shelved "Toon
7 Teens" during the very same month that it claims to have first learned of Bryant's
8 contract with MGA, November, 2003, and using the same counsel that Mattel is 9 using in the Bryant Litigation. A true and correct copy of this registration is 10 attached hereto as Exhibit B. Notably, Bryant is informed that the dates on Mattel's 11 "Toon Teens" drawings and pictures reflect that they were created in 1999, after 12 Bryant conceived of "Bratz" in 1998.

13 60. On information and belief, Mattel's copyright registration of "Toon
14 Teens" is no coincidence; it is a preliminary step necessary for Mattel to sue Bryant 15 for copyright infringement.

16 61. There is no doubt that Mattel intends to get back at Bryant via false
17 allegations and to try to obtain control of Bryant's brainchild any way it can,
18 including falsely alleging that "Bratz" is nothing more than derivative of Mattel's
19 own work(s). This is wholly untrue. "Bratz," is an original idea and concept, 20 independently conceived and created during a time when Bryant was not working 21 for Mattel. The fact that MGA reduced the original designs to practice and further 22 developed "Bratz" into a highly successful product that now competes directly with 23 and has taken market share from Mattel's "Barbie" line of fashion dolls, including 24 as a result of the "Bratz"-inspired and imitating dolls distributed by others, is not to 25 be under-estimated.

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Declaratory Judgment of Non-infringement)

62. Bryant repeats and realleges the allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 61 of this Complaint and incorporates them by reference, as though fully and completely set forth herein.

63. Bryant has a reasonable apprehension that Mattel will bring an action against him under 17 U.S.C.A. §§ 101, et seq. alleging that "Bratz" is not an independent or original work but, rather, is copied, derived from or infringes Mattel's copyrights in "Toon Teens," or some other Mattel work; that Mattel is the rightful owner of his "Bratz" idea, concept or original drawings or works and any copyrights and other intellectual property rights therein; and that Mattel alone possesses the exclusive rights to exploit such rights.

64. Bryant contends that "Bratz" is his own independent and original idea, concept and work, that "Bratz" dolls were derived from Bryant's original idea, concept and work, and that Mattel has no right in "Bratz" whatsoever. Bryant denies that he copied any of Mattel's property or work in conceiving and developing "Bratz," and denies that "Bratz" infringes or was derived from any Mattel property or work.

65. Indeed, "Bratz" and "Toon Teens" are not substantially similar. "Bratz" are sexy, hip, modern fashion dolls with up-to-date fashions, and are designed to look like real teenagers, and the "Bratz" themes and playsets are based on places and activities that real teenagers would go to and do. Bryant is informed that "Toon Teens," in contrast, appear to be childlike, soft-bodied dolls with "baby-fat" and bright, fantasy-colored hair and are, by Mattel's own statements to the Wall Street Journal, "cartoonish."

66. An actual and justiciable controversy exists between Bryant and Mattel regarding whether Bryant's ideas, concepts, or designs for, or contributions to,

1 "Bratz" were and are original works, or copied from, derivative of or infringing on 2 Mattel's works, be it "Toon Teens," or any other unidentified Mattel work.

3 67. This actual and justiciable controversy arises under federal copyright 4 law.

5 68. Bryant seeks Declaratory Judgment of non-infringement; specifically 6 that his ideas, concepts, and designs for, and contributions to, "Bratz" were and are 7 original works, and were and are not copied from, derivative of or infringing on any 8 Mattel work.

9 69. A judicial declaration of non-infringement is necessary and 10 appropriate at this time pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, so that Bryant may ascertain
11 his rights and duties with respect to "Bratz," including but not limited to dispelling
12 any potential cloud over his ability to have assigned or otherwise transferred rights 13 to his original works to MGA. It is also necessary to clear Bryant's name and 14 mitigate the continuing damage to his reputation resulting from Mattel's unfounded
15 representations about Bryant made in the press and to the defendants in the Hong 16 Kong Litigation.

17 WHEREFORE, Bryant hereby prays for relief against Mattel as 18 follows:

- 19 1. For a Declaratory Judgment of non-infringement.
- 20 2. For a Declaratory Judgment that Bryant's ideas, concepts,
21 drawings and designs for, and contributions to, "Bratz" were and are independent 22 and original works, and were and are not copied from, derivative of or infringing
23 any Mattel work, including, without limitation, Mattel's copyrighted "Toon Teens."
- 24 3. For a Declaratory Judgment that Bryant was the sole and true 25 owner of all rights relating to "Bratz" that Bryant heretofore assigned to MGA and 26 that such rights were owned by Bryant free and clear of any ownership claim by 27 Mattel at the time he assigned rights to MGA. .
- 28 4. For a Declaratory Judgment that none of Bryant's contributions

1 to and work on "Bratz" infringes Mattel's copyrighted "Toon Teens" or any other
2 property allegedly owned by Mattel and that all such contributions to and work on 3 "Bratz" by Bryant were independent and original to Bryant.

4 5. For costs of suit herein, including reasonable attorneys' fees,
5 and such other and further relief as the court may deem just and proper.

Dolled Up: To Lure Older Girls, Mattel Brings In Hip Hop Crowd

It Sees Stalwart Barbie Lose Market Share, So 'Flavas' Will Take on the 'Bratz'---
Battle of the Big Heads

By Maureen Tkacik

LOS ANGELES -- Tika, 10 inches tall with two-toned hair, is of ambiguous ethnic origin -- maybe she's Asian, maybe Latina -- but her "platinum" medallion, airbrushed jean jacket, shell toe sneakers and graffiti-streaked packaging make one thing clear.

"She's like . . . hip-hop," said Crystal Audigier, 10 years old, as she rifled through the first crate of "Flavas" dolls to arrive at a Los Angeles FAO Schwarz store last week.

Mattel Inc. hopes the dolls are hip enough to take on the "Bratz." The Flavas (pronounced "Flay-vuhs," like "flavors"), a set of six dolls brought from design to production in just three months, represent a striking gamble for the giant toy company. In the 44 years since it introduced its bombshell Barbie, Mattel has rarely brought out a doll line to compete with her.

But Mattel, which had become accustomed to its buxom blonde dominating the market, has watched in alarm as Barbie has been challenged by a smaller toy maker's Bratz -- a line of big-headed, pouty-lipped characters. While Barbie, which posted about $1.7 billion in sales for Mattel last year, is still queen, her share of the so-called fashion-doll market has fallen, almost entirely due to the Bratz.

After trying -- and failing -- to defeat the Bratz with a trendier Barbie last year, Mattel has come up with a radical battle plan. Among other things, that means curtailing its reliance on, and near-reverence toward, its cash cow. While Barbie is still a plaything of choice for girls 3 to 7 years old, it's been years since she managed to hold the attention of the tweens, or 8- to 12-year-olds. With the Flavas, Mattel is trying to get back into that market -- even if it risks cannibalizing its biggest product.

Mattel has tweaked Barbie many times since she was introduced in 1959: bronzing her skin during the 1970s, introducing black and Hispanic counterparts and giving her a band (the fuchsia-clad "Rockers") during the 1980s. Mattel even shrunk her chest and widened her hips in 1998.

But Mattel now concedes Barbie has gradually lost touch with some young girls' lives. "Barbie began as a great girl who was simply a reflection of popular culture, but in the past few years we had sort of put her on a pedestal," says Matt Bousquette, president of the newly created Mattel Brands unit, which consolidated the boys' and girls' toys divisions. "We're taking her off that pedestal."

While Mr. Bousquette and his team overhaul Barbie, he is also enlisting the Flavas, who wear sweats and heavy chains and have names like "Troc" and "P. Bo," as a second force with which to fight the Bratz. Mattel says hip-hop -- which it defines as "a cultural phenomenon . . . dimensionalized through freestyle dance, street sports, music and fashion" -- has gained sufficient ground in the mainstream to have its own toy line.

"Mattel is recognizing that there are other trends besides Barbie that girls want to play with," says Manny Francione, divisional merchandise manager for Toys "R" Us Inc., Paramus, N.J. "Hip-hop is one of those trends."

The Bratz, developed by a toy maker called MGA Entertainment Inc., North Hills, Calif., were introduced in the summer of 2001. They became a hit with tweens, an age group of girls that the toy industry had almost written off.

For the past decade, toy makers have been grappling with a phenomenon analysts call "age compression," in which media-saturated youngsters are outgrowing dolls and other toys at an earlier age. NPD Group Inc., a market-research firm, says toy spending on children peaks at age 3 and steadily declines after that, with spending on 12-year-olds at about a quarter of the peak level. By attracting tweens, the Bratz bucked that trend.

Bratz "appealed to an older girl . . . who is not necessarily still a Barbie customer," says Sean McGowan, a longtime industry analyst with Gerard Klauer Mattison. "Nothing's ever challenged Barbie like the Bratz." At Barbie's 1997 peak, a year in which Mattel posted $1.9 billion in sales of the doll, her clothing and accessories, she boasted more than a 90% share of the fashion-doll market, Mr. McGowan says. Barbie held at least 85% of the market right before the Bratz were introduced, he says, but her share has now dropped to about 70%.

The history of the Bratz is intertwined with Mattel. MGA says the Bratz were designed by Carter Bryant, a former member of the Barbie team. Inside Mattel, some are convinced the Bratz borrow liberally from a Mattel project that was scrapped at the testing stage in 1998. Mattel declined to comment.

Mr. Bryant didn't work on the line that Mattel scrapped, according to former and current Mattel designers. But most Barbie designers had seen the prototypes, his former colleagues say. Mr. Bryant, through MGA, declined to be interviewed.

The Mattel doll line that was scrapped wasn't exactly like the Bratz, says a longtime Mattel designer who worked on the project. But the Bratz's oversized heads -- with their pursed lips and cartoonish eyes -- are "actually identical" to the heads of the dolls her team created, says the designer, who left Mattel in 2001.

Lily Martinez, a designer who still works at Mattel, came up with the idea for the big doll heads for Mattel, colleagues say. Mattel declined to comment. She even posted her sketch on her cubicle, colleagues say. "Anyone who passed by her cubicle would see the picture up on the wall," says another designer who also left Mattel in 2001. "The big heads, the big eyes, the big feet -- they were all the same" as the Bratz. Ms. Martinez declined to comment.

The Mattel dolls were scrapped in testing, current and former designers say, because Mattel had strict quotas that allowed only one "flanker brand" -- that is, a brand that would compete with Barbie for shelf space -- on the market at a time. At the time, Mattel chose a product called "what's Her Face" -- a doll with a blank face on which kids could draw expressions. That doll remains on the market; Mattel declined to discuss its sales.

Designers say they often faced a higher bar for non Barbie projects. And Barbie's image was carefully protected. Bruce Stein, who was president of Mattel until 1998, says that former Chief Executive Jill Barad nixed an idea for "Barbie as Xena" dolls in 1998.

Ms. Barad was replaced in 2000, after Mattel's disastrous $3.5 billion acquisition of a software maker called The Learning Company. Under her successor, Robert Eckert, a former Kraft Foods president, the company has returned to profitability by cutting its work force 10%, streamlining its supply chain and developing international sales, among other things. Mattel, which reported a net loss of $431 million in 2000, reported net income of $230 million last year. Its stock has risen about 76% since Mr. Eckert arrived.

Isaac Larian, chief executive of MGA, says he had never heard of a project similar to the Bratz at Mattel. He says he chose Mr. Bryant's idea for the Bratz over several others after holding a sort of fashion-doll design contest in late 1999.

Mr. Larian, who emigrated to the U.S. from Iran, founded his company in the late 1970s, making a name by picking up the license for hand-held Pac-Man games. Though his company had made baby dolls before, it had never made fashion dolls. He says he was motivated by a challenge from a Wal-Mart Stores Inc. buyer to "give me something that can compete with Barbie."

This year, closely held MGA expects revenue of about $800 million -- with 65% of that coming from the Bratz. The company says it's profitable, but won't discuss specifics. Mr. Bryant still does design work for MGA, Mr. Larian says, and collects royalties on the Bratz line.

Mattel began worrying about the Bratz's momentum during the 2001 holiday season. Barbie sales fell 12% in the U.S. that year, despite a marketing campaign featuring an animated video, "Barbie in the Nutcracker."

By spring of 2002, Adrienne Fontanella, then president of the girls' division, decided to launch what the company termed a more "reality based" Barbie line. Like the Bratz, the "My Scene" Barbies boasted bigger heads and feet and fuller lips, as well as trendier clothes.

Mr. Larian, the head of MGA, calls the My Scene dolls a "cheap imitation" of the Bratz. Mattel declined to comment. Introduced in October 2002, the My Scene Barbies helped Mattel's sales, but still ranked behind the Bratz during the 2002 holiday season, according to NPD. "My Scene has been just OK for us," says Fred Hurley, a longtime girls'-toys buyer for KB Toys Inc., Pittsfield, Mass.

In February, Ms. Fontanella's job, along with others, was eliminated in what Mr. Eckert called a "restructuring" of Mattel's executive ranks aimed at "increasing efficiency."

Mr. Bousquette, the then-head of Mattel's boys' toy division, became the first man to take control of Barbie in more than a decade. "It used to be that whoever ran Barbie ran the company, not the other way around," says Mr. Stein, the former president. "For Matt to be in charge is a major shift."

Mattel no longer has quotas on how many products can compete with Barbie. After sitting through a girls'-design-team presentation in March, Mr. Bousquette seized upon the Flavas as the ideal dolls to compete for the dollars of Bratz buyers. Ivy Ross, head of girls' design, suggested bringing them to market for the spring 2004 season. Mr. Bousquette said the company should aim for this July instead.

"We were stunned," says a designer who worked on the Flavas and left the company in May. Another surprise: Mr. Bousquette asked the team to make the dolls look more hip-hop than the prototypes. "No one had really believed in the concept before that meeting, and it was stuck in this back-and-forth where first they were too edgy, then they weren't edgy enough," says the designer. "Matt came through and cut all of that out." Mr. Bousquette says he told designers to make the dolls "as authentic as possible, as quickly as possible."

Flavas are more complicated to manufacture than most fashion dolls. They are all different heights -- meaning separate molds -- and they have 10 points at which they can move, allowing them to strike a variety of poses. The Flavas design team often slept in their cubicles to get the dolls ready in time for summer shipment. Two designers each clocked 53 hours during Memoria' Day weekend to prepare the line for the company's annual toy fair held in the first week of June.

Some buyers have been impressed. Mattel's girls' division "has never been a particularly forward-thinking group, but the Flavas are right on trend," says KB's Mr. Hurley. The six dolls in the Flavas line are certainly edgier than anyone in Barbie's clique. The Flavas girls have highlighted hair, flashier jewelry and wear midriff-baring tops with low-slung pants. Unlike Barbie, they have flat feet and wear sneakers. The two boy Flavas dolls sport earrings and serious expressions. Boxer underwear appears to show from the top of their cargo pants.

The Flavas come in boxes splashed with black-and-white photos of urban scenes shot around Venice Beach. When arranged together, the boxes create a "graffiti" mural that reads: "FA SIZZLE." It is a play on the hip-hop expression "Fa' shizzle," which means "For sure." Marketing director Lisa Tauber explains that it is also an acronym that stands for "Fashion, Attitude and Sizzlin' Style." The dolls, aimed at 9- to 11-year-olds, are "all about fearless self-expression," she says.

MGA's Mr. Larian says he isn't scared by the Flavas. "The only thing that's missing is a cocaine vial," he says. "You think of Mattel, you think of Barbie and you think of sweetness. . . . This is like 'gangster' Barbie, and I think it's going to backfire."

Telejah Dean, a nine-year-old from West Los Angeles noticed the Flavas last week, as she was admiring Mattel's Mary-Kate and Ashley dolls. The Flavas are "not as pretty as Barbie," she said. But her older sister, Tiffany, 22, seemed impressed by the blond Happy D. doll. "Look, she's got black [hair] extensions like Christina," she exclaimed, referring to pop singer Christina Aguilera.

In fact, Mattel has hired people to give out Flavas hats, wristbands and decals during Ms. Aguilera's concert tour this summer. Ms. Aguilera, who got her start on the Disney Channel, is now probably as well known for her 11 body piercings and her mud wrestling-themed MTV video called "Dirrty." "It's a sign of the changing times, says Mattel spokeswoman Julia Jensen. "The old Mattel probably wouldn't try to tie up with someone like Christina Aguilera."

- 01/17/2008 1561 MINUTES ORDER (IN CHAMBERS). The Settlement Officer appointed by the Court in this action has brought to the Courts attention that the parties have contested how the costs of settlement should be allocated among the parties. See October 31, 2007, Order ("The parties will be jointly responsible for paying the Ambassadors reasonable and customary rate for services rendered.") In light of the Courts 10/31/07, Order, the Settlement Officer has, understandably, split the costs among the parties four ways. Compare 12/6/06, Order, paragraph 8 (appointing Discovery Master and providing that costs are to be allocated as one-half to Mattel and one-half to the MGA entities and Carter Bryant). The parties may e-file position briefs on this matter no later than Tuesday, 1/22/08 (and deliver a courtesy copy thereof to chambers no later than noon the following day). Thereafter, the Court will take the matter under submission and issue an order regarding settlement cost allocation. As always, if the parties are able reach a stipulation to resolve this issue, the Court will consider such a stipulation, to be filed no later than the deadline set forth above for position briefs. IT IS SO ORDERED, by Judge Stephen G. Larson. (de) (Entered: 01/22/2008)
